

HORIZONTAL MADNESS

Sexologist Carrie Borzillo solves all your amorous issues

I like to smoke a joint before sex, but my boyfriend likes to drink wine. I think our sex is affected by this as we don't seem to be on the same page. Please help.

Pot and wine are usually as perfect bedfellows as, well, porn stars and musicians, models and actors, or Asian tourists and businessmen. So it's slightly weird that it's not quite working out for you two. Wine, or any booze, is a funny thing. It makes us girls lose our inhibitions greatly and swing from chandeliers, turn bisexual for a night, offer up threesomes at clubs, or agree to anal. (Or maybe that's just me!) But too much alcohol for a guy can make his penis go limp, his thrusts fall flat, and his stamina weakens. So maybe your guy is drinking too much. Or maybe you're smoking too much and instead of getting into that euphoric, dreamy sex state that is oh-so-good for sex, you're getting the weird or giggly type of high that is simply not sexy in bed. Try playing around with your amounts—smoke a little less; drink a little less. That might get you on the same page.

This guy I'm dating has lava lamps all over his bedroom. This would be fine if he was in college...but he's 35. I like dating him and don't want to insult him but they really creep me out. What should I do?

I had the same exact problem. My first husband's apartment before me was lined with lava lamps and (gasp) action figures still in their boxes stapled to his wall as if it were art. I nearly walked out the first time I stepped in his place. But, I liked him enough to let him do his thing and when it came time to moving in together, I nicely suggested that his crap wouldn't really fit in our beautiful new home and he acquiesced quite quickly. We ended up donating a lot of his crap to Toys for Tots and got a great write-off that year. So hang in there. If the guy likes you, treats you well, is great in bed, and you have fun with him, are a few little throwbacks from the '70's really a deal-breaker? Or go to Plan B: Put a bunch of age inappropriate stuffed animals on your bed and get him really creeped out when you start introducing them to him by name. When he says something, you make a deal: I'll get rid of the furrries if you get rid of the lavas.

Is it true that Moroccan hashish is an aphrodisiac? My girlfriend seems to only give me a blow job after she smokes it.

And the problem is? Whatever gets your girl to swallow your manhood is a good thing. Don't question it. Enjoy it. There are girls out there whose lips never touch a penis. She's doing what she needs to do to get in the mood, unhinge that jaw, and let your love slide in. However you get your blowjob is, as Martha Stewart would say, a good thing. But, yes, it's true that some forms of pot or hash get girls horny. Aphrodisiacs don't work on everyone, though, and some are purely mythical. I mean, I have yet to see a guy or gal get horny after eating oysters. The best aphrodisiacs are of the verbal kind: tell her she has the sexiest body ever even if she doesn't. Tell her she's the best fuck you've ever had even if she isn't. Look in her eyes as you're inside her and tell her she's amazing. Those are the best aphrodisiacs I know!

I want to have my honeymoon in a nice tropical place where me and my wife can smoke and run naked on the beach and not worry about getting busted. Where should we go?

I have yet to find a nude beach that sanctions drug use. In fact, most nude beaches are controlled by associations and have strict rules about drugs. That said, the hedonism vacations might be a good place to check out. I've been to Hawaii many times and always find a remote little area of the beach to have sex in and have yet to get caught. And, besides, pot smoking is a way of life in Hawaii, as it is in Jamaica. Your best bet is to simply Google, Yelp, or Poynt your way to a great nude beach and bring a concealing one-hitter that looks like a cigarette and you're good to go.

I like playing Pink Floyd's Dark Side of the Moon while having sex with my girlfriend, but she thinks it is a total turn-off. Can you suggest any other cool albums that might put her in the mood?

I actually went through a Pink Floyd/sex phase, but that was just when I was in the mood for sensual lovemaking. Now that that silly phase is over, I like albums that make me feel like a sex kitten, a whore, or a dominatrix. If that's the result you want in bed, try these albums: Goldfrapp's Supernature, Sneaker Pimp's Becoming X, or the Purple Rain soundtrack (but skip the slow songs). Kings of Leon works well too, as does some dirty, gritty, sexy old Rolling Stones or classic David Bowie. If you really love your Floyd, though, use it when you jerk off alone. And, the bottom line, really, is to ask her what music turns her on and make sure you have it cued up and ready to go before her panties hit your floor.

Carrie Borzillo is an entertainment journalist, sex writer, and author of three books: Tera Patrick's Sinner Takes All: A Memoir of Love and Porn, Cherry Bomb: The Ultimate Guide to Becoming a Better Flirt, a Tougher Chick, and to Living Life like a Rock Star, and Eyewitness Nirvana.

carriebo.com

facebook.com/carrieborzillo

Send your questions to: carrie.borzillo@gmail.com